

CAMP GIRLS EVEN SCORE ON BUGLER

Truss Up Man Who Gets Them Out of Bed at 6:30 Each Morning.

'GIMCRACK' CONVENIENCES ARE BARED OFFICIALLY

Patent Wadnotes, Dainty Shoeboxes and Folding Bathtubs Placed on Taboo List.

Four pretty young society girls of Washington had a perfectly lovely time in the first drill class this morning at the women's "preparedness" camp, Chevy Chase. They were allowed to get even with David Kemp, the pink-cheeked youth who, as bugler of the Marine Corps, bugles them up at 6:30 each morning and bugles again in fifteen minutes as a signal that they should be all dressed for inspection.

These girls, every one of them an army officer's daughter, trussed up David with bandages and handkerchiefs till he was huddled and foot at their mercy. Then they practiced holding him up at arms' length. "It was a long way to fall if they dropped him," said one of the girls, "but they didn't."

They ended the agony by telling him it was time for him to bugle some more, and so they unbanded him.

Camp Conveniences Barred.

Camp conveniences were barred this morning officially. There was a demonstration of folding wardrobes which could be fastened to the mainmast of the tent, but she was not allowed to demonstrate. She also had some very dainty crotone boxes for shoes that she was not allowed to put on sale. Thus was strict neutrality preserved. For yesterday afternoon, any girl had the temerity to visit the camp seeking to demonstrate folding bathtub, was shown the door.

Capt. (Mrs.) Charles Belknap of Philadelphia, wife of a naval officer, is officer of the camp. She is a striking figure in her khaki uniform, with a red sash across her left shoulder.

A calisthenic drill was arranged today for the day's drill.

All Eagers for Duty.

Miss Caille Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Smith of Georgia, is one of the most eager students in the camp. She is finding the outdoor life very interesting. She is one of the most apt students at telegraphy and wireless, and has been delegated to help other girls in learning the signal code.

An interesting thing about the camp is the eagerness of all the girls to help in every way possible. They offer to perform clerical work, and many have the temerity to visit the camp seeking to demonstrate folding bathtub, was shown the door.

Very popular. Dr. William R. Davis gave the girls a lecture last night on camp hygiene and sanitation. The girls were very interested in the lecture. Dr. Davis is a member of the Army Medical School and is giving demonstration on how to care for a patient in a tent, putting up mosquito netting, etc.

Special Favorites Join Camp.

Owing to the demand of their official position Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State, is prevented from spending very much of her time in the camp. She is, however, deeply interested in the service school and is a member of the reception committee.

Mrs. Genevieve Clark Thompson, daughter of Speaker Clark, is the latest arrival. She is a member of the reception committee and is giving a lecture on the importance of the camp.

Mrs. Marion Oliver, daughter of former Secretary of War Robert Shaw Oliver, has joined the camp faculty. She has taken charge of the instruction section of the camp and has opened a general information tent.

Day Students Made Happy.

The day students are happy today. Heretofore they have been wandering about the camp site. They are not supposed to visit the resident students in their tents and have had no place that they could call their own to rest up in or even a place to hang up a hat or coat. They have had some privileges not allowed the public, but have been annoyed by being held up by the guards because they had no distinguishing uniform.

They have been relieved to have hereafter a neat uniform of their own, consisting of a khaki arm band and a khaki sash. They are now in the instruction section of the camp.

A pretty exhibition yesterday afternoon, illustrating the importance of the camp, was given by the girls. They were taking in instructions, when a battalion of "rookies" under Sgt. Maj. H. Lewis Hulse took down two service tents, moved them and set them up again. The sergeant said they obeyed instructions promptly making no mistakes. In the squad were some well known Washington girls—Candace Howard, Frances Melver, Helen Hopkins, Juliet B. Rublee, Frances Lippitt, Anne Tracy and Marie Sims.

Dish-Washing Emergency Met.

The girls also gave a demonstration of their ability to adapt themselves to circumstances when the dish-washing force failed to show up, and girls volunteered from each company for this work and did it in such a way as to win the commendation of the Marine Corps officers in charge of the mess tent.

During the reception hour at the camp yesterday afternoon, the girls entertained some very distinguished visitors. The British ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, and the Russian ambassador, George Baklanoff, the Japanese ambassador, Viscount Chinda, the Persian chargé d'affaires, Mirza Kuli-Khan, and many of the younger members of the diplomatic corps were interested visitors.

The District Commissioners were conducted around the camp by Commandant Elizabeth Elliott Poe, and expressed themselves as greatly pleased with the entire equipment. "It certainly is as fine a camp as I have seen," said Commissioner Oliver T. Newman. "I think it will do these young women a great deal of good. They are evidently taking their work very seriously," as his glance across the drill field showed several groups going through the march signal code.

Many Registering Again.

During this camp inspection, Lieut. Mrs. Charles H. Brown of Baltimore was officer of the day. Her guards were Miss Sarah Elizabeth Fisher, daughter of Mr. Alexander Gordon, Miss Anne Keyser, Miss Edna D. Andrews of New York and Miss Mary W. Colket of Philadelphia, all well known in Washington society.

Many of the students are registering for a second two weeks. Miss Phillis Cleveland, daughter of former President Grover Cleveland, is among those who will spend the entire month in camp. Mrs. Caleb Powers of Washington also registered for the second course.

The interest that other places are taking in this National Service School was shown yesterday when a woman from the National Security League of Boston visited the camp, seeking information for her guidance in organizing a similar one there. Blue prints of the camp are being made for distribution to the National Security League throughout the country where the women are eager to have camps.

Hygienic Counsel Popular.

The course in elementary hygiene and home care of the sick is proving very popular. This is a special course, arranged with particular view to preparedness, including first-aid work. For these classes four large tents, with equipment of sixteen-cots, are used for the demonstrations. These are in charge of Miss Lillian Kenally and Miss Kell, who have been giving instructions in this line of work for four or five weeks, under the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Mothers need have no anxiety about their daughters in the camp. Besides a score of Red Cross trained nurses, who are ready to care for any emergency, there are two doctors in constant attendance. There is a night guard of fourteen men for the camp and woman officers patrol the camp streets all night.

Among the Washington matrons who have enrolled for the second course are: Mrs. George S. Barnes, Mrs. Augusta W. Blinn, Mrs. C. Odenheimer, Mrs. A. L. Gitterman, Mrs. T. M. Gordon, Mrs. S. R. Hopkins, Mrs. Caleb Powers, Mrs. Charles Warren and Mrs. Richard Young.

Miss Caille Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Smith of Georgia, is one of the most eager students in the camp. She is finding the outdoor life very interesting. She is one of the most apt students at telegraphy and wireless, and has been delegated to help other girls in learning the signal code.

An interesting thing about the camp is the eagerness of all the girls to help in every way possible. They offer to perform clerical work, and many have the temerity to visit the camp seeking to demonstrate folding bathtub, was shown the door.

Very popular. Dr. William R. Davis gave the girls a lecture last night on camp hygiene and sanitation. The girls were very interested in the lecture. Dr. Davis is a member of the Army Medical School and is giving demonstration on how to care for a patient in a tent, putting up mosquito netting, etc.

Special Favorites Join Camp.

Owing to the demand of their official position Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State, is prevented from spending very much of her time in the camp. She is, however, deeply interested in the service school and is a member of the reception committee.

Mrs. Genevieve Clark Thompson, daughter of Speaker Clark, is the latest arrival. She is a member of the reception committee and is giving a lecture on the importance of the camp.

Mrs. Marion Oliver, daughter of former Secretary of War Robert Shaw Oliver, has joined the camp faculty. She has taken charge of the instruction section of the camp and has opened a general information tent.

Day Students Made Happy.

The day students are happy today. Heretofore they have been wandering about the camp site. They are not supposed to visit the resident students in their tents and have had no place that they could call their own to rest up in or even a place to hang up a hat or coat. They have had some privileges not allowed the public, but have been annoyed by being held up by the guards because they had no distinguishing uniform.

They have been relieved to have hereafter a neat uniform of their own, consisting of a khaki arm band and a khaki sash. They are now in the instruction section of the camp.

A pretty exhibition yesterday afternoon, illustrating the importance of the camp, was given by the girls. They were taking in instructions, when a battalion of "rookies" under Sgt. Maj. H. Lewis Hulse took down two service tents, moved them and set them up again. The sergeant said they obeyed instructions promptly making no mistakes. In the squad were some well known Washington girls—Candace Howard, Frances Melver, Helen Hopkins, Juliet B. Rublee, Frances Lippitt, Anne Tracy and Marie Sims.

Dish-Washing Emergency Met.

The girls also gave a demonstration of their ability to adapt themselves to circumstances when the dish-washing force failed to show up, and girls volunteered from each company for this work and did it in such a way as to win the commendation of the Marine Corps officers in charge of the mess tent.

During the reception hour at the camp yesterday afternoon, the girls entertained some very distinguished visitors. The British ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, and the Russian ambassador, George Baklanoff, the Japanese ambassador, Viscount Chinda, the Persian chargé d'affaires, Mirza Kuli-Khan, and many of the younger members of the diplomatic corps were interested visitors.

The District Commissioners were conducted around the camp by Commandant Elizabeth Elliott Poe, and expressed themselves as greatly pleased with the entire equipment. "It certainly is as fine a camp as I have seen," said Commissioner Oliver T. Newman. "I think it will do these young women a great deal of good. They are evidently taking their work very seriously," as his glance across the drill field showed several groups going through the march signal code.

Many Registering Again.

During this camp inspection, Lieut. Mrs. Charles H. Brown of Baltimore was officer of the day. Her guards were Miss Sarah Elizabeth Fisher, daughter of Mr. Alexander Gordon, Miss Anne Keyser, Miss Edna D. Andrews of New York and Miss Mary W. Colket of Philadelphia, all well known in Washington society.

Many of the students are registering for a second two weeks. Miss Phillis Cleveland, daughter of former President Grover Cleveland, is among those who will spend the entire month in camp. Mrs. Caleb Powers of Washington also registered for the second course.

The interest that other places are taking in this National Service School was shown yesterday when a woman from the National Security League of Boston visited the camp, seeking information for her guidance in organizing a similar one there. Blue prints of the camp are being made for distribution to the National Security League throughout the country where the women are eager to have camps.

Hygienic Counsel Popular.

The course in elementary hygiene and home care of the sick is proving very popular. This is a special course, arranged with particular view to preparedness, including first-aid work. For these classes four large tents, with equipment of sixteen-cots, are used for the demonstrations. These are in charge of Miss Lillian Kenally and Miss Kell, who have been giving instructions in this line of work for four or five weeks, under the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Mothers need have no anxiety about their daughters in the camp. Besides a score of Red Cross trained nurses, who are ready to care for any emergency, there are two doctors in constant attendance. There is a night guard of fourteen men for the camp and woman officers patrol the camp streets all night.

Among the Washington matrons who have enrolled for the second course are: Mrs. George S. Barnes, Mrs. Augusta W. Blinn, Mrs. C. Odenheimer, Mrs. A. L. Gitterman, Mrs. T. M. Gordon, Mrs. S. R. Hopkins, Mrs. Caleb Powers, Mrs. Charles Warren and Mrs. Richard Young.

Miss Caille Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Smith of Georgia, is one of the most eager students in the camp. She is finding the outdoor life very interesting. She is one of the most apt students at telegraphy and wireless, and has been delegated to help other girls in learning the signal code.

An interesting thing about the camp is the eagerness of all the girls to help in every way possible. They offer to perform clerical work, and many have the temerity to visit the camp seeking to demonstrate folding bathtub, was shown the door.

Very popular. Dr. William R. Davis gave the girls a lecture last night on camp hygiene and sanitation. The girls were very interested in the lecture. Dr. Davis is a member of the Army Medical School and is giving demonstration on how to care for a patient in a tent, putting up mosquito netting, etc.

Special Favorites Join Camp.

Owing to the demand of their official position Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State, is prevented from spending very much of her time in the camp. She is, however, deeply interested in the service school and is a member of the reception committee.

Mrs. Genevieve Clark Thompson, daughter of Speaker Clark, is the latest arrival. She is a member of the reception committee and is giving a lecture on the importance of the camp.

Mrs. Marion Oliver, daughter of former Secretary of War Robert Shaw Oliver, has joined the camp faculty. She has taken charge of the instruction section of the camp and has opened a general information tent.

Day Students Made Happy.

The day students are happy today. Heretofore they have been wandering about the camp site. They are not supposed to visit the resident students in their tents and have had no place that they could call their own to rest up in or even a place to hang up a hat or coat. They have had some privileges not allowed the public, but have been annoyed by being held up by the guards because they had no distinguishing uniform.

They have been relieved to have hereafter a neat uniform of their own, consisting of a khaki arm band and a khaki sash. They are now in the instruction section of the camp.

A pretty exhibition yesterday afternoon, illustrating the importance of the camp, was given by the girls. They were taking in instructions, when a battalion of "rookies" under Sgt. Maj. H. Lewis Hulse took down two service tents, moved them and set them up again. The sergeant said they obeyed instructions promptly making no mistakes. In the squad were some well known Washington girls—Candace Howard, Frances Melver, Helen Hopkins, Juliet B. Rublee, Frances Lippitt, Anne Tracy and Marie Sims.

Dish-Washing Emergency Met.

The girls also gave a demonstration of their ability to adapt themselves to circumstances when the dish-washing force failed to show up, and girls volunteered from each company for this work and did it in such a way as to win the commendation of the Marine Corps officers in charge of the mess tent.

During the reception hour at the camp yesterday afternoon, the girls entertained some very distinguished visitors. The British ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, and the Russian ambassador, George Baklanoff, the Japanese ambassador, Viscount Chinda, the Persian chargé d'affaires, Mirza Kuli-Khan, and many of the younger members of the diplomatic corps were interested visitors.

The District Commissioners were conducted around the camp by Commandant Elizabeth Elliott Poe, and expressed themselves as greatly pleased with the entire equipment. "It certainly is as fine a camp as I have seen," said Commissioner Oliver T. Newman. "I think it will do these young women a great deal of good. They are evidently taking their work very seriously," as his glance across the drill field showed several groups going through the march signal code.

Many Registering Again.

During this camp inspection, Lieut. Mrs. Charles H. Brown of Baltimore was officer of the day. Her guards were Miss Sarah Elizabeth Fisher, daughter of Mr. Alexander Gordon, Miss Anne Keyser, Miss Edna D. Andrews of New York and Miss Mary W. Colket of Philadelphia, all well known in Washington society.

Many of the students are registering for a second two weeks. Miss Phillis Cleveland, daughter of former President Grover Cleveland, is among those who will spend the entire month in camp. Mrs. Caleb Powers of Washington also registered for the second course.

The interest that other places are taking in this National Service School was shown yesterday when a woman from the National Security League of Boston visited the camp, seeking information for her guidance in organizing a similar one there. Blue prints of the camp are being made for distribution to the National Security League throughout the country where the women are eager to have camps.

Hygienic Counsel Popular.

The course in elementary hygiene and home care of the sick is proving very popular. This is a special course, arranged with particular view to preparedness, including first-aid work. For these classes four large tents, with equipment of sixteen-cots, are used for the demonstrations. These are in charge of Miss Lillian Kenally and Miss Kell, who have been giving instructions in this line of work for four or five weeks, under the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Mothers need have no anxiety about their daughters in the camp. Besides a score of Red Cross trained nurses, who are ready to care for any emergency, there are two doctors in constant attendance. There is a night guard of fourteen men for the camp and woman officers patrol the camp streets all night.

Among the Washington matrons who have enrolled for the second course are: Mrs. George S. Barnes, Mrs. Augusta W. Blinn, Mrs. C. Odenheimer, Mrs. A. L. Gitterman, Mrs. T. M. Gordon, Mrs. S. R. Hopkins, Mrs. Caleb Powers, Mrs. Charles Warren and Mrs. Richard Young.

Miss Caille Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Smith of Georgia, is one of the most eager students in the camp. She is finding the outdoor life very interesting. She is one of the most apt students at telegraphy and wireless, and has been delegated to help other girls in learning the signal code.

An interesting thing about the camp is the eagerness of all the girls to help in every way possible. They offer to perform clerical work, and many have the temerity to visit the camp seeking to demonstrate folding bathtub, was shown the door.

Very popular. Dr. William R. Davis gave the girls a lecture last night on camp hygiene and sanitation. The girls were very interested in the lecture. Dr. Davis is a member of the Army Medical School and is giving demonstration on how to care for a patient in a tent, putting up mosquito netting, etc.

Special Favorites Join Camp.

Owing to the demand of their official position Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State, is prevented from spending very much of her time in the camp. She is, however, deeply interested in the service school and is a member of the reception committee.

Mrs. Genevieve Clark Thompson, daughter of Speaker Clark, is the latest arrival. She is a member of the reception committee and is giving a lecture on the importance of the camp.

Mrs. Marion Oliver, daughter of former Secretary of War Robert Shaw Oliver, has joined the camp faculty. She has taken charge of the instruction section of the camp and has opened a general information tent.

Day Students Made Happy.

The day students are happy today. Heretofore they have been wandering about the camp site. They are not supposed to visit the resident students in their tents and have had no place that they could call their own to rest up in or even a place to hang up a hat or coat. They have had some privileges not allowed the public, but have been annoyed by being held up by the guards because they had no distinguishing uniform.

They have been relieved to have hereafter a neat uniform of their own, consisting of a khaki arm band and a khaki sash. They are now in the instruction section of the camp.

A pretty exhibition yesterday afternoon, illustrating the importance of the camp, was given by the girls. They were taking in instructions, when a battalion of "rookies" under Sgt. Maj. H. Lewis Hulse took down two service tents, moved them and set them up again. The sergeant said they obeyed instructions promptly making no mistakes. In the squad were some well known Washington girls—Candace Howard, Frances Melver, Helen Hopkins, Juliet B. Rublee, Frances Lippitt, Anne Tracy and Marie Sims.

Dish-Washing Emergency Met.

The girls also gave a demonstration of their ability to adapt themselves to circumstances when the dish-washing force failed to show up, and girls volunteered from each company for this work and did it in such a way as to win the commendation of the Marine Corps officers in charge of the mess tent.

During the reception hour at the camp yesterday afternoon, the girls entertained some very distinguished visitors. The British ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, and the Russian ambassador, George Baklanoff, the Japanese ambassador, Viscount Chinda, the Persian chargé d'affaires, Mirza Kuli-Khan, and many of the younger members of the diplomatic corps were interested visitors.

The District Commissioners were conducted around the camp by Commandant Elizabeth Elliott Poe, and expressed themselves as greatly pleased with the entire equipment. "It certainly is as fine a camp as I have seen," said Commissioner Oliver T. Newman. "I think it will do these young women a great deal of good. They are evidently taking their work very seriously," as his glance across the drill field showed several groups going through the march signal code.

Many Registering Again.

During this camp inspection, Lieut. Mrs. Charles H. Brown of Baltimore was officer of the day. Her guards were Miss Sarah Elizabeth Fisher, daughter of Mr. Alexander Gordon, Miss Anne Keyser, Miss Edna D. Andrews of New York and Miss Mary W. Colket of Philadelphia, all well known in Washington society.

Many of the students are registering for a second two weeks. Miss Phillis Cleveland, daughter of former President Grover Cleveland, is among those who will spend the entire month in camp. Mrs. Caleb Powers of Washington also registered for the second course.

The interest that other places are taking in this National Service School was shown yesterday when a woman from the National Security League of Boston visited the camp, seeking information for her guidance in organizing a similar one there. Blue prints of the camp are being made for distribution to the National Security League throughout the country where the women are eager to have camps.

Hygienic Counsel Popular.

The course in elementary hygiene and home care of the sick is proving very popular. This is a special course, arranged with particular view to preparedness, including first-aid work. For these classes four large tents, with equipment of sixteen-cots, are used for the demonstrations. These are in charge of Miss Lillian Kenally and Miss Kell, who have been giving instructions in this line of work for four or five weeks, under the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Mothers need have no anxiety about their daughters in the camp. Besides a score of Red Cross trained nurses, who are ready to care for any emergency, there are two doctors in constant attendance. There is a night guard of fourteen men for the camp and woman officers patrol the camp streets all night.

Among the Washington matrons who have enrolled for the second course are: Mrs. George S. Barnes, Mrs. Augusta W. Blinn, Mrs. C. Odenheimer, Mrs. A. L. Gitterman, Mrs. T. M. Gordon, Mrs. S. R. Hopkins, Mrs. Caleb Powers, Mrs. Charles Warren and Mrs. Richard Young.

Miss Caille Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Smith of Georgia, is one of the most eager students in the camp. She is finding the outdoor life very interesting. She is one of the most apt students at telegraphy and wireless, and has been delegated to help other girls in learning the signal code.

An interesting thing about the camp is the eagerness of all the girls to help in every way possible. They offer to perform clerical work, and many have the temerity to visit the camp seeking to demonstrate folding bathtub, was shown the door.

Very popular. Dr. William R. Davis gave the girls a lecture last night on camp hygiene and sanitation. The girls were very interested in the lecture. Dr. Davis is a member of the Army Medical School and is giving demonstration on how to care for a patient in a tent, putting up mosquito netting, etc.

Special Favorites Join Camp.

Owing to the demand of their official position Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State, is prevented from spending very much of her time in the camp. She is, however, deeply interested in the service school and is a member of the reception committee.

Mrs. Genevieve Clark Thompson, daughter of Speaker Clark, is the latest arrival. She is a member of the reception committee and is giving a lecture on the importance of the camp.

Mrs. Marion Oliver, daughter of former Secretary of War Robert Shaw Oliver, has joined the camp faculty. She has taken charge of the instruction section of the camp and has opened a general information tent.

Day Students Made Happy.

The day students are happy today. Heretofore they have been wandering about the camp site. They are not supposed to visit the resident students in their tents and have had no place that they could call their own to rest up in or even a place to hang up a hat or coat. They have had some privileges not allowed the public, but have been annoyed by being held up by the guards because they had no distinguishing uniform.

They have been relieved to have hereafter a neat uniform of their own, consisting of a khaki arm band and a khaki sash. They are now in the instruction section of the camp.

A pretty exhibition yesterday afternoon, illustrating the importance of the camp, was given by the girls. They were taking in instructions, when a battalion of "rookies" under Sgt. Maj. H. Lewis Hulse took down two service tents, moved them and set them up again. The sergeant said they obeyed instructions promptly making no mistakes. In the squad were some well known Washington girls—Candace Howard, Frances Melver, Helen Hopkins, Juliet B. Rublee, Frances Lippitt, Anne Tracy and Marie Sims.

Dish-Washing Emergency Met.

The girls also gave a demonstration of their ability to adapt themselves to circumstances when the dish-washing force failed to show up, and girls volunteered from each company for this work and did it in such a way as to win the commendation of the Marine Corps officers in charge of the mess tent.

During the reception hour at the camp yesterday afternoon, the girls entertained some very distinguished visitors. The British ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, and the Russian ambassador, George Baklanoff, the Japanese ambassador, Viscount Chinda, the Persian chargé d'affaires, Mirza Kuli-Khan, and many of the younger members of the diplomatic corps were interested visitors.

The District Commissioners were conducted around the camp by Commandant Elizabeth Elliott Poe, and expressed themselves as greatly pleased with the entire equipment. "It certainly is as fine a camp as I have seen," said Commissioner Oliver T. Newman. "I think it will do these young women a great deal of good. They are evidently taking their work very seriously," as his glance across the drill field showed several groups going through the march signal code.

Many Registering Again.

During this camp inspection, Lieut. Mrs. Charles H. Brown of Baltimore was officer of the day. Her guards were Miss Sarah Elizabeth Fisher, daughter of Mr. Alexander Gordon, Miss Anne Keyser, Miss Edna D. Andrews of New York and Miss Mary W. Colket of Philadelphia, all well known in Washington society.

Many of the students are registering for a second two weeks. Miss Phillis Cleveland, daughter of former President Grover Cleveland, is among those who will spend the entire month in camp. Mrs. Caleb Powers of Washington also registered for the second course.

The interest that other places are taking in this National Service School was shown yesterday when a woman from the National Security League of Boston visited the camp, seeking information for her guidance in organizing a similar one there. Blue prints of the camp are being made for distribution to the National Security League throughout the country where the women are eager to have camps.

Hygienic Counsel Popular.

The course in elementary hygiene and home care of the sick is proving very popular. This is a special course, arranged with particular view to preparedness, including first-aid work. For these classes four large tents, with equipment of sixteen-cots, are used for the demonstrations. These are in charge of Miss Lillian Kenally and Miss Kell, who have been giving instructions in this line of work for four or five weeks, under the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Mothers need have no anxiety about their daughters in the camp. Besides a score of Red Cross trained nurses, who are ready to care for any emergency, there are two doctors in constant attendance. There is a night guard of fourteen men for the camp and woman officers patrol the camp streets all night.

Among the Washington matrons who have enrolled for the second course are: Mrs. George S. Barnes, Mrs. Augusta W. Blinn, Mrs. C. Odenheimer, Mrs. A. L. Gitterman, Mrs. T. M. Gordon, Mrs. S. R. Hopkins, Mrs. Caleb Powers, Mrs. Charles Warren and Mrs. Richard Young.

Miss Caille Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Smith of Georgia, is one of the most eager students in the camp. She is finding the outdoor life very interesting. She is one of the most apt students at telegraphy and wireless, and has been delegated to help other girls in learning the signal code.

An interesting thing about the camp is the eagerness of all the girls to help in every way possible. They offer to perform clerical work, and many have the temerity to visit the camp seeking to demonstrate folding bathtub, was shown the door.

Very popular. Dr. William R. Davis gave the girls a lecture last night on camp hygiene and sanitation. The girls were very interested in the lecture. Dr. Davis is a member of the Army Medical School and is giving demonstration on how to care for a patient in a tent, putting up mosquito netting, etc.

Special Favorites Join Camp.

Owing to the demand of their official position Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State, is prevented from spending very much of her time in the camp. She is, however, deeply interested in the service school and is a member of the reception committee.

Mrs. Genevieve Clark Thompson, daughter of Speaker Clark, is the latest arrival. She is a member of the reception committee and is giving a lecture on the importance of the camp.

Mrs. Marion Oliver, daughter of former Secretary of War Robert Shaw Oliver, has joined the camp faculty. She has taken charge of the instruction section of the camp and has opened a general information tent.

Day Students Made Happy.

The day students are happy today. Heretofore they have been wandering about the camp site. They are not supposed to visit the resident students in their tents and have had no place that they could call their own to rest up in or even a place to hang up a hat or coat. They have had some privileges not allowed the public, but have been annoyed by being held up by the guards because they had no distinguishing uniform.

They have been relieved to have hereafter a neat uniform of their own, consisting of a khaki arm band and a khaki sash. They are now in the instruction section of the camp.

A pretty exhibition yesterday afternoon, illustrating the importance of the camp, was given by the girls. They were taking in instructions, when a battalion of "rookies" under Sgt. Maj. H. Lewis Hulse took down two service tents, moved them and set them up again. The sergeant said they obeyed instructions promptly making no mistakes. In the squad were some well known Washington girls—Candace Howard, Frances Melver, Helen Hopkins, Juliet B. Rublee, Frances Lippitt, Anne Tracy and Marie Sims.

Dish-Washing Emergency Met.

The girls also gave a demonstration of their ability to adapt themselves to circumstances when the dish-washing force failed to show up, and girls volunteered from each company for this work and did it in such a way as to win the commendation of the Marine Corps officers in charge of the mess tent.

During the reception hour at the camp yesterday afternoon, the girls entertained some very distinguished visitors. The British ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, and the Russian ambassador, George Baklanoff, the Japanese ambassador, Viscount Chinda, the Persian chargé d'affaires, Mirza Kuli-Khan, and many of the younger members of the diplomatic corps were interested visitors.

The District Commissioners were conducted around the camp by Commandant Elizabeth Elliott Poe, and expressed themselves as greatly pleased with the entire equipment. "It certainly is as fine a camp as I have seen," said Commissioner Oliver T. Newman. "I think it will do these young women a great deal of good. They are evidently taking their work very seriously," as his glance across the